INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — An Indianapolis teen-ager was shot to death by his younger brother Sunday because he refused to share his ice cream, police said.

Willie Williams, 15, was struck by a shotgun charge fired at point-blank range by his 12-year-old brother, Charles, who later blurted to his mother, "I shot him — I said I would and I did."

Police said the older brother returned from a restaurant with an ice cream sundae. Charles asked for part of the ice cream, and the teen-ager replied, "Get lost." As he turned to leave, he was struck in the head by the shotgun blast.

JFK Stamp On Sale May 29

WASHINGTON (AP) — The John F. Kennedy Memorial Stamp is in blue-gray color and bears a likeness of the slain president and a drawing of the flame that burns at his grave.

The Post Office Department disclosed the design Sunday and announced the 5-cent stamp will be placed on sale nationally on May 29, the 47th anniversary of Kennedy's birth.

His widow selected the design.

Successor For Boehm Sought

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Scranton has appointed a six-man committee to recommend a successor to Dr. Charles H. Boehm as state superintendent of public instruction.

LL. Gov. Raymond P. Shafer, considered as an education authority during his days in the state Senate, was named chairman of the committee.

Boehm resigned his $20,000-a-year job to become a consultant to the minister of education of Columbia, under the sponsorship of the State Department, the National Education Association and the World Bank.

Santo Domingo Riots Erupt

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — Unruly crowds burned tires, smashed bottles and dumped garbage in Santo Domingo streets Sunday despite police attempts to halt demonstrations that accompanied a strike tying up public transportation.

A grave threat to the ruling triumvirate appeared to be developing.

The government declared the drivers' strike illegal. All taxis and buses in the city were at a standstill.

Round-the-Clock Coin Making

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — President Johnson has approved a plan to put the U.S. mints in Denver and Philadelphia on an around-the-clock basis seven days a week to combat a national coin shortage, Sen. Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., said Sunday.

Cannon said Johnson persuaded the Budget Bureau to free surplus funds now on hand to pay for increased production until the U.S. Mint appropriation before Congress can clear the Senate, deadlocked over the civil rights bill.

The appropriation is effective July 1, the start of the new fiscal year.

The emergency funds approved by Johnson will boost coin production about 25 per cent, Cannon said.

Kids Hit By Radiation

NEW YORK (AP) — Sixteen youngsters were exposed to possible radiation poisoning at a Manhattan construction site Sunday but were released from a hospital after examinations.

A Roosevelt Hospital physician said there were no tests available to determine radiation dosages and released the children with instructions that they return if they develop any signs of nausea or skin burns from radiation.

Police said the children were playing near an X-ray machine being used to test for flaws in steel beams used in the construction of the new Metropolitan Opera House.

Yemeni Display Heads On Poles

LONDON (AP) — The Defense Ministry said Sunday the bodies of two British soldiers, killed by Yemeni tribesmen in a border clash, were later beheaded and the heads displayed on poles in the desert town of Taiz.

Cuban Threat Pooh-Poohed

HAVANA (AP) — Western diplomats believe Prime Minister Fidel Castro will steer clear of a showdown with the United States over American reconnaissance flights for at least several months.

There is a virtual guarantee

Second Class Weapons Left By Reds In Cuba

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is believed to have taken home the top-grade anti-aircraft missiles it installed in Cuba, leaving Fidel Castro with second-class weapons to back up his threats against U.S. surveillance flights.

This is the word in some Washington quarters as the world waits to see what the Cuban Communist will do to support his assertion that "we will prevent these flights to the limits of what our weapons can do."

This phrasing could have unusual significance.

It could mean that the limit of capability for the ground-launched missiles apparently being turned over by the Soviets to the Cuban Red forces is less than it has been when Soviet troops controlled and manned the 24 launching sites.

The report that the Cuban air defense system had been degraded conceivably could help explain Washington's calm insistence that it will go ahead with the surveillance flights despite Havana's threat to shoot down the planes.

—Castro realized the nearness of general elections in the United States would prevent the Johnson administration from making any concessions to Cuba.

—Castro wouldn't want to do anything to swing the election to the Republicans. He said last week he didn't want a triumph by "warmongers" and in the past has included Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and the Republican party under that label.

Limiting optimism is the realization that Castro has committed himself to stopping the spy flights and that a dangerous incident could be provoked at any time.

—The Soviet Union has demonstrated in India a shrewd instinct for flashy foreign aid programs that pay off in maximum propaganda at minimum cost.

This is apparent in the announcement that the Soviets will lend—not give—$420 million to India.

—Indian newspapers splashed the announcement with cheers.

Nobody was mentioning the fact that the United States aid program pumped more than $3.3 billion into India since 1951 and it is at least 10 times the size of the Soviet foreign aid program.

U.S. aid, which does such unpunctuated things as feeding hungry children, is spread all over India.

Although some Indians admit privately that U.S. aid has been a major factor in holding the Indian economy together, the American aid program often does not have the single smashing impact of the Soviet program.

Soviets in the past invested money in monument-like projects that could be photographed and publicized easily. They stuck to this tradition in selecting Bokaro and in addition got a bonus of jumping into one of the major irritants in U.S.-India relations.

The Kennedy administration was initially enthusiastic about helping to build Bokaro coalfields 150 miles west of Calcutta.

Congress then balked on two points: The mill would be government-owned in line with India's policy of public-owned basic industries and it might not be economically and technically feasible.

Prime Minister Nehru's government let Washington off the hook and withdrew its request for aid.

But none can boast of such a choice location as Teen Haven's Times Square area site.

against a grave incident prior to the U.S. presidential election in November, these observers say.

In the meantime, Castro is expected to carry his protests against the surveillance flights to the United Nations, starting with the Security Council.

After analyzing Castro's fiery May Day speech in Revolution Square, the Western diplomats noted with optimism his mention of using "international legal means and international organizations" to halt the flights over his island.

If the world forums fail to halt the flights, Castro told the crowd of workers, "Cuba will repel that aggression with arms."

Although Castro has implied that when he mentions force, he includes Soviet ground-to-air rockets now installed in Cuba, those rockets are still under Soviet control.

Castro admitted last week that Cuba could not shoot down one of America's high-flying U2 reconnaissance planes without the Soviet rockets.

Washington observers recently predicted a Cuban takeover of the rockets as Soviet troops leave Cuba. But the Western diplomats in Havana say the Soviet Union is reluctant to put the rocket control in Cuban hands.

One African diplomat expressed it this way: "Why should the Russians be willing to give Castro a blank check to get them a crisis which could lead to a world war?"

The diplomats also see these factors as preventing a showdown before November:

—It will take some months at least for the United Nations to complete a study and take action on Cuba's expected demands that the flights be stopped.

—Castro realizes the nearness of general elections in the United States would prevent the Johnson administration from making any concessions to Cuba.

—Castro wouldn't want to do anything to swing the election to the Republicans. He said last week he didn't want a triumph by "warmongers" and in the past has included Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and the Republican party under that label.

Reds Spark Saigon Jitters

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Mounting Communist Viet Cong terrorism gave this Vietnamese capital the jitters Sunday. U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge denounced the Viet Cong tactics as murderous and revolting to civilized people everywhere.

Lodge made the statement after narrowly missing involvement in a grenade attack that injured eight Americans and one Vietnamese on a street near the Communist-sabotaged U. S. aircraft ferry card on Saturday night.

In the countryside, meanwhile Viet Cong guerrillas ambushed a jeep and injured slightly a Polish major attached to the International Control Commission made up of Poles, Indians and Canadians. The white-painted commission vehicles have come under Viet Cong fire before but this was the first time a Communist representative was the victim.

A South Vietnamese unit walked into an ambush on a secondary road 20 miles west of Saigon and lost 17 infantrymen and civil guardsmen killed and 31 wounded—30 per cent of the entire outfit.

Lodge drove along the Saigon street 10 minutes before a Viet Cong terrorist riding a bicycle lobbed a homemade grenade into a group of strolling American officers and men. Lodge was on his way to inspect the damaged ship.

Five of the injured were hospitalized. Four were described as in good condition. An eye injury will keep the fifth man in the hospital longer than the rest.

"This is typical of the murderous methods used by the Viet Cong and must appear utterly revolting to civilized people everywhere," Lodge said after a Sunday visit with the hospitalized men.

Hundreds of terrorist attacks have occurred in Saigon in the past 10 years, but there was growing concern that the Communists would use the month of May, which contains several Communist and Vietnamese holidays, for an all-out terror campaign.

Military Intelligence sources said Viet Cong sabotage and assassination teams have been infiltrating the city for the past few weeks.

Experts say 40 or even 50 per cent would be a good showing.

Of the 75 countries to take part in the long negotiations, the most important are the six that have joined in the European Common Market—France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg. President Charles de Gaulle is unlikely to let French industry take on the heavy American competition that so deep a tariff cut would bring.

Edward Heath, president of the British Board of Trade, goes along with the 40 per cent cut, but Britain's weight is less than it used to be.

Kiichi Miyazawa, the minister who heads the economic planning agency in Japan, told newsmen he is optimistic on winning tariff cuts for industrial goods, less optimistic when it comes to farm products.

The United States maintains that one cannot be done without the other.

Of the Communist countries, only Czechoslovakia, Poland and Yugoslavia will take a limited part.

President John F. Kennedy put the trade expansion act through Congress in 1962. It gave him and his successor more power to swap trade concessions than any president ever had. It was to have been the economic framework of his great design for a closely knit Atlantic community.

When asked if Scranton personally would request Truax to ease his latest effort, Conny referred to Scranton's statement at an April 9 news conference.

At that time, he said he could not order Truax to bring the drive to a halt because it was a party matter over which he, as governor, had no real control.

Truax said this newest effort would involve about 60 people who would travel about at their own expense and would work independently of the Scranton-for-President clubs now functioning in more than 12 states.

He declined, however, to identify the members of his "good-will" team.

The chairman said the ambassadors would "establish contacts with the delegates (to the GOP national convention), learn their platform wishes and exchange information on the situation in the various states." He added:

Stop Goldwater, Javits Urges GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., said Sunday there is danger that Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona will walk off with the GOP presidential nomination while his critics stand idly by.

Javits, supporting New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, in a statement issued here and in Portland, Ore., urged Republican moderates to come out fighting against a Goldwater nomination he said would be disastrous for the party. He is in Oregon to campaign for Rockefeller in the state's May 15 primary.

"There is too much complacency in my party over the situation that is developing," Javits said. "It is being taken for granted that Sen. Goldwater will not be nominated. The major primaries to date have demonstrated that Republicans are not enthusiastic about him. Nonetheless, he is quietly piling up delegates toward the 655 needed to nominate."

"There is danger that the Republican party could nominate a candidate who, according to the polls, is the choice of only about a fifth of the nation's rank-and-file Republicans. To do so, in my opinion, would be disastrous for the two-party system and therefore for the nation."

"And no candidate in this century who has received more than 500 votes on the first ballot has failed to go on and win the nomination of his party," Javits said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona over the weekend widened his lead in The Associated Press poll of delegates to the Republican presidential nominating convention.

Sunday's AP figures give Goldwater 204 with 655 needed for the nomination.

As expected, Sen. Margaret Chaso Smith of Maine will have that state's 14 delegates as long as she is a candidate for the presidential nomination.

Allentown Man Dies In Crash

NENIA, Ohio (AP) — Alvin L. C. Nall, 25, of Allentown, Pa., died Saturday from injuries received in a highway accident near the Wright-Patterson Air Force Base. Authorities said Nall was killed when his car was struck by a truck while he was riding a motorcycle.

More Money Sought For MH

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pennsylvania Mental Health, Inc., a citizens group, has urged Gov. Scranton to increase state activities in the prevention and diagnosis of childhood mental illness and to boost his current budget request for community mental health services.

The group made the request Saturday after reporting that 32,700 public school children in Pennsylvania are emotionally disturbed. The report was based on a study of 388,550 of them in 17 counties.

There are 215 million school-age children in the state.

"If this percentage is applied to the total school-age population in the state, then approximately 210,000 Pennsylvania children have been identified as 'standing out like sore thumbs' in classrooms," Mental Health, Inc. said.

4 Get Awards For Journalism

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Four representatives of Pennsylvania were among those honored Saturday night as some of 1963's journalistic accomplishments were cited by Sigma Delta Chi journalism society.

Pennsylvania recipients of the awards:

David P. Forsyth, Chilton Co., Philadelphia, research about journalism, cited for his book, "The Business Press in America, 1750 to 1865."

Smith Ready To Forget Demo Feud

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Francis R. Smith, Philadelphia Democratic chairman, has indicated he'll forget inter-party squabbles and support either Justice Michael A. Musmanno or state Secretary of Internal Affairs Governor Bluff for the U.S. Senate in November.

Smith, however, refuses to count on Musmanno in the tabulating of last Tuesday's primary election. With all of but 10 of the state's 2,251 precincts reported, Musmanno trails Miss Bluff by a scant 3,111 votes.

"All the votes in this election have not been counted," Smith said Saturday. "Absentee ballots may decide the issue. My personal estimate is that it will go one way or the other by about 1,500 votes. Justice Musmanno should not emerge. Neither should Miss Bluff."

Smith said he is certain that either Musmanno, a member of the state Supreme Court, or Miss Bluff will defeat U.S. Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., who is seeking re-election in the general election Nov. 3.

Smith, who backed Musmanno for the Democratic Senate nomination, indicated he's ready to forget the bitter exchanges he had during the primary campaign with U.S. Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., a Bluff supporter. "I am willing to work with Sen. Clark," Smith said, "or with anyone else, to help our candidate defeat Sen. Scott in November. I am out to defeat Musmanno and I don't bar any help."

Indiana Democratic Primary

Wallace Votes Mean Anti-Welsh

By Louis Harris (National Pollster)

The challenge of Gov. George Wallace for the North in civil rights will meet its test tomorrow in the Indiana Democratic primary. In Wisconsin's April Democratic primary, Wallace amassed a surprising 33% of the vote.

These are the key facts about tomorrow's Democratic primary in Indiana:

Alabama's Gov. George Wallace will receive approximately three in 10 of the votes cast in the Presidential primary against Gov. Matthew Welsh, running as a favorite son "stand-in" for President Lyndon Johnson.

However, Governor Welsh cannot be considered a stand-in for the President, since Governor Wallace would be resoundingly defeated, 91-9% if Mr. Johnson himself appeared on the ballot.

Two out of three people who intend to vote for Governor Wallace say they are NOT casting their ballots on the basis of his stand against civil rights.

A hard-core of one Democratic primary voter in every five wants to vote AGAINST Governor Welsh to protest his state administration's policies on spending the taxes.

— the real size of the white "backlash" on civil rights here in Indiana appears to be no more than 10%.

It is therefore fair to conclude that a comprehensive survey of a cross-section of Indiana voters, with special emphasis on those likely to vote in the Democratic primary tomorrow, clearly shows that the size of the vote for Governor Wallace cannot be taken as an accurate measure of the civil rights "backlash."

To the contrary, the survey showed that voters in the Hoosier State are 60-40% in favor of the pending civil rights bill in Congress and by 70-30% approve of the controversial public accommodations section. These figures closely parallel the national averages.

Most dramatic is the contrast between the vote Wallace is able to muster against Governor Welsh and that he would receive if President Johnson were pitted against him:

Wallace vs. Welsh, Johnson Undecided Vote

	In	Out	Per Cent	Per Cent
Wallace vs. Welsh	21	28
Welsh	61	72
Not sure	15
Wallace vs. Johnson	8	9
Johnson	85	91

— the real size of the white "backlash" on civil rights here

Part of the reason for the vast difference in the Wallace showing against Welsh, on the one hand, and Mr. Johnson, on the other, rests in the public assessment of the job both men are thought to be doing:

Johnson, Welsh Job Rating

	Johnson	Welsh	Per Cent	Per Cent
Positive	72	28
Negative	28	72

Governor Welsh is widely criticized by Indiana voters mainly over a recent increase in taxes as well as his spending policies. By contrast, President Johnson is widely praised by these voters.

Proof of the hard-core vote that exists against Governor Welsh—regardless of his opponent tomorrow—emerges clearly when Indiana voters are asked to choose between the governor and three other Democrats: Governor Wallace, conservative Sen. Frank Lausche of Ohio and Liberal Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota:

Welsh vs. Other Democrats

Vote Against Gov. Welsh

	Per Cent	Per Cent
Hubert Humphrey	53
Frank Lausche	50
George Wallace	28

Of the three men matched against Governor Welsh, Wallace came out third best. Lausche outdrew the Alabama governor by a small margin, while Humphrey would actually receive over 50% of the votes cast.

In fact, Governor Wallace

meets with resounding disapproval from the voters in Indiana. Some 62% of the voters feel familiar with him. Of these people 71% said they disapproved of Wallace; 29% said they approved of him. When asked about his stands on various issues, mostly civil rights, 86% of those who felt they were familiar with him expressed disapproval.

When the reasons for the Wallace vote are probed in depth, it is clear that roughly one-third of his vote is derived from the civil rights issue. Wallace voters were asked if they felt a big Wallace vote tomorrow would indicate that there had been a "backlash" in Indiana against civil rights:

Implication Of Wallace Vote

	Per Cent
Yes	35
No	65

Big Wallace Vote Means:

Civil rights "backlash"

Not a "backlash"

Much the same conclusion can be drawn from reasons Wallace voters expressed when discussing their vote in their own words:

Reasons For Voting Wallace

	Total	Per Cent
Like his civil rights stands	8
Dislike Welsh fiscal policies	15
Like Wallace personality	3
Wallace experienced	2
Not Voting For Wallace	72

At most, 10% of the Democratic vote in Indiana tomorrow can be classified as a civil rights "backlash." This figure approximates the estimated nationwide white protest over civil rights obtained in earlier surveys.

Assembly Aims At Fiscal Bill Okay

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The General Assembly returns to action after a month-long recess Monday in the hope of winding up both the regular 1964 and concurrent special sessions by the end of May.

The key event of the week should be the long-awaited introduction of the $1-billion-plus general appropriations bill which embraces the vast bulk of Gov. William W. Scranton's $1.168 billion General Fund budget for 1964-65.

The introduction is due in the House either Monday or Tuesday. The measure, together with about $38 million in non-preferred appropriations dropped in the hopper earlier, are expected to be cleared for floor action Tuesday by the House Appropriations Committee.

A tentative schedule calls for the House to send the money package—the omnibus bill plus the parcel of state aid for schools, colleges, hospitals and other institutions—to the Senate next week.

Action also is due this week on the topics still requiring handling during the special session. The Legislature freed itself of the big hot potato—Scranton's major unemployment compensation UC bill—before the recess, and action on other measures should be smooth.

Possible Problem

The one possible stumbling block could be the technical companion to the big UC measure which bears Senate approval and is ready for final House action. Helm said if the Democrats decide to fight the technical proposal, his side would drop it as it is not needed.

The House has on the floor the administration's eminent domain bill and is expected to pass it this week.

The status of other special session measures includes:

—A three-bill package creating a new program to care for elderly senile patients of state institutions, House-passed and in Senate committee.

—Expanding the Blind Veterans' Act covering, Senate-passed and in House committee.

—The "Project 70" implementation bill, in the Senate Forestry and Waters Committee and slated to be moved when the eminent domain bill passes the House.

On The Floor

The House now has on the floor $21 million in General Fund appropriations, largely of the housekeeping variety, and is expected to pass them this week, possibly Monday.

Rights Rally Slated Today In Chester

CHESTER, Pa. (AP) — A civil rights leader who called off an announced mass rally and march Saturday says a fresh demonstration protesting alleged de facto segregation in Chester's public schools will be held Monday night.

The Chester school board has planned a special session for Stanley E. Branche, chairman of the Chester Committee for the same night.

Freedom Now, said he called off Saturday's rally because "undesirable elements" from Philadelphia and New York planned to participate. Branche said some "were bringing weapons" and they were out to "create incidents and violence."

He said he felt he couldn't control this out-of-town element, which he said was not in sympathy with the CCFN's goals.

On another front, the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission will open hearings here Monday into the segregation charges.

The commission stepped into the controversy in an attempt to end violence which has attended civil rights demonstrations for the past month.

Elliot Shick, executive director of the commission, said it "can and will" solve the dispute.

An agenda has already been drawn up tentatively to allow the demonstrators to first present their case. Then the city officials would answer the charges.

Shick said the agenda could be changed at a pre-hearing meeting of the commission Monday morning.

Despite an intense advance buildup, only a hundred or so persons were on the sidewalk Saturday when Branche called off the rally.

ENR informed policemen were stationed throughout the business district, about 20 blocks away from Branche's headquarters, but were withdrawn following the postponement.

Branche had gone ahead with plans for Saturday's rally despite an announcement earlier in the week by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People of a second-day moratorium on demonstrations.

"We have called off the rally for the sake of continuing violence and peaceful demonstrations, and to prevent a civil war in Chester," he said.

Health Officer Asks ESSC Action On Swamp Eyesore

EAST STROUDSBURG — Officials at East Stroudsburg State College say plans are underway to correct a combination swamp-rubbish-garbage dump on campus, but the East Stroudsburg borough health officer says the talk of plans "is the same runaround" he has been getting for years.

Children Copy Smoking Parents

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a large proportion of cases, parents introduce their sons and daughters to smoking by their own example, a government researcher said.

He said high school smoking might be cut by one-third to one-half if neither parent smoked.

Parental smoking, he continued, seems to establish that smoking is approved and expected.

The researcher, Dr. Daniel Horn, made his remarks in a report to the opening session of the National Conference on Smoking and Youth. He based his statements on a study, with which he was associated, of young people in Portland, Ore.

president, said the General State Authority has allocated $300,000 to alleviate the drainage problem at the college. The area in dispute is being filled in so a parking lot can be built, according to Dr. Koehler.

Dr. M. J. Leitner, East Stroudsburg health officer, said, "This place amounts to a rubbish dump in the center of town. When you talk to the college they always have plans but nothing ever gets done."

Parking Area
At the basis of this conflict is a piece of college-owned land on S. Green St. behind the ESSC power station. The land was recently purchased by ESSC with the intention of filling the area in and making a parking lot.

Harold Larison Jr., assistant borough health officer, said he is having William Shoemaker, Monroe County sanitarian, look at the land today. He said he will make a complete report to Dr. Leitner immediately.

The water problem was created when a stream on the land was choked off and the area was turned into a swamp.

Dr. Koehler said plans to channel all the college's surface water into Broadheads Creek have been drawn and are awaiting approval by the borough, state highway department and Erie-Lackawanna Railroad.

He explained the approvals are needed in order to pipe water into the creek.

Eyesore And Menace
Dr. Leitner claims the area is an eyesore and potential health menace.

"At one time this area was serviced by a nice little running stream. The college used to conduct its biology classes there. Now with all the fill the place has been converted into a mess of stagnant water," Dr. Leitner complained.

He said he has been complaining about the condition for years but to no avail. "I am making my complaint now as an irate citizen. If nothing is done I will investigate to see what I can do as the borough's health officer."

$300,000 In Budget
Dr. Koehler said he can never remember when the creek ever flowed. "That place was always a swamp. I think I did my part by putting $300,000 in this year's budget to correct the situation."

The president agreed that the present condition presents an unsightly scene. "However," he said, "the borough owned that land for a good many years and never did a thing to improve it."

Dr. Koehler said since the state owns the land now everyone expects the situation to be cleared up immediately. "When we get this taken care of it will be a big asset to the community," he said.

The situation was made public when Dr. Leitner wrote a letter to the editor of The Daily Record complaining of the existing conditions.

The Lady Lion

Miss Genevieve Blatt, the lady lion of Pennsylvania politics, will give Republican Senator Hugh Scott a hard race for his seat in Congress if she wins her close primary battle with Supreme Court Justice Michael Musmanno.

If the absentee and military ballots split her way, she will turn her present 3,114-vote margin into one of the most surprising upset victories in recent Pennsylvania politics. She ran almost alone against the Democratic party machine.

The three-time Pennsylvania Secretary of Internal Affairs, who twice beat experienced male politicians for the state-wide post, may take on incumbent Senator Hugh Scott in the November general election.

Already, as Pennsylvania columnist Mason Denison points out on this page today, Republicans are beginning to realize that a Scott-Blatt campaign in November will be a lot tougher than a Scott-Musmanno battle.

Senator Scott, a polished, articulate clever and popular politician, is favored to win a second term.

He defeated former Democratic Gov. George Leader by 112,765 votes in 1958, when Democrats were sweeping Pennsylvania offices.

And Scott has consolidated his position by establishing a liberal-Republican voting record while remaining an effective critic of Democratic administrations and policies. He has thus attracted heavy independent backing, and even some Democratic support.

But Miss Blatt would be a formidable foe.

A "Stevenson Democrat" in 1954, she became the first woman elected Pennsylvania Secretary of Internal Affairs, was re-elected in 1958, and managed to win a 1,390-vote squeaker in 1962 against a strong Republican tide of victories led by William Scranton.

The Democratic public servant, well-versed in the techniques and problems of modern state government, has proven her strength at the polls against great odds.

She will undoubtedly get most of the Democratic organization backing in November which she lacked in the April primary, and will win back some of the independent and Democratic votes which Scott took in 1958.

Genevieve Blatt can give Senator Scott a much harder race for his seat than Justice Musmanno could even run. Senator Scott is no longer a shoo-in.

Maybe He Means It

Although Governor William Scranton made a respectable showing with his record 220,000 write-in votes in the primary last week, some of the other write-in totals suggest why the governor may mean it when he says he really is not interested in running for President this year.

Although Scranton won 220,000 write-in votes, or 58 per cent of the write-in votes, Henry Cabot Lodge, who did nothing, won 80,000 votes, or 21 per cent.

Lodge, Richard Nixon, Barry Goldwater, Nelson Rockefeller, Margaret Chase Smith, George Romney, Harold Stassen and George Wallace won a total of 157,941 write-in votes—all without any organized sticker drive like that mounted for Governor Scranton.

These may be considered anti-Scranton Republican protest votes.

On the other side of the political fence, a more significant write-in was the 176,176 vote victory of President Lyndon B. Johnson.

When put together the two non or anti-Scranton write-in totals show that the Republican Governor would have a tough fight on his hands here in his home state of Pennsylvania if he were the Presidential nominee.

So, behind the silver-lined cloud of that 220,000-vote write-in record lies a political storm-warning for Governor Scranton.

He probably senses this, and obviously knows that any Republican who runs against President Johnson will probably lose his shirt.

Maybe he means it when he says he doesn't want to run for President just now.

Comment Of The Day

"I have lived a long life. Sometimes it was rather turbulent. Sometimes it was troublesome and there were periods when it was burdensome. But in the main it has been a full and happy life—more than any one man had a right to expect."

—Former President Harry S. Truman speaking of his 80th birthday next Friday.

Shriver Twits A Foe

By George Dixon
WASHINGTON — Sargent Shriver should worry that he might become hooked. Once a Congressman to his face he can get such a charge out of it that he is in danger of becoming addicted.

The fast-thinking husband of Eunice Kennedy experimented with this precarious pleasure the other day, and many of his friends are now concerned as to what the harvest may be.

The man picked by President Johnson to head the war against poverty obviously got so much enjoyment out of taunting Rep. Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen, the Republican blue blood of Morristown, N.J., it is apt to lead to a habit he won't be able to kick.

Mr. Shriver can be excused for treating himself to the exhilarating shot because he came to Capitol Hill all puffed up, anyhow.

The director of the Peace Corps, who has a habit of succeeding at everything he goes into, got his initial shot from one of the most unlikely sources imaginable, the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

He told the Chambermen that the battle against poverty was non-partisan, and they cheered him, even though they were well aware that he had been mentioned as a Democratic possibility for Vice President.

Possibly overstimulated by this, he felt the customary wraps were off when he took the witness chair before the House Education and Labor Committee.

The legislative branch of government has an ingrained aversion to being glibbed at by the administrative. The lawmakers feel that any twitting should be unilateral. Mostly they make this stick. But Mr. Shriver struck it.

When Rep. Frelinghuysen said he had a substitute of his own for the administration's anti-poverty bill, but that it did not include a "Federal Job Corps" for idle youths as President Johnson's program does, Shriver sank this harpoon:

"I would have been very much surprised if your program did include anything as practical as that."

"There is probably nothing on earth as calculated to render a Republican, and especially a rich blue blood Republican, emotional as an implication that the GOP is the party against the poor. Mr. Frelinghuysen reacted as emotionally as the most needing Democrat could wish. The president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals couldn't have looked more affronted if he'd been accused of lifting a beagle by its ears.

Then to add to Mr. Frelinghuysen's sense of outrage, he was informed by Rep. James Roosevelt of California that a major feature of his substitute bill was "just plain stupid."

No descendant of Dutch aristocrats can tolerate a charge that anything he does is plain stupid. It's got to be fancy stupid.

I don't know how Sargent Shriver feels now about starting all this, but it would seem that he is flying straight in the face of the image he has been trying to project. As an aficionado of a television commercial put it:

"Sarge Shriver can't indulge in this casually ridicule and go around being 'Mr. Clean'."

The lead article in the April-June issue of the Civil Service Journal, published quarterly by the U. S. Civil Service Commission, is under the byline of Robert S. McNamara. It is enough to jolt a reader out of his chair, because it begins:

"When the President first asked that I accept appointment as the Secretary of Defense in his Cabinet, my immediate reaction was to question my own competency."

'Of Course, There Are Exceptions to Every Program'

The Pennsylvania Story

By Mason Denison
HARRISBURG — There is a rumble of uneasiness in the Republican camp in Pennsylvania these days.

It isn't because there is any particular or outstanding dissonance within the land of the elephant voters; rather, it stems from what they witness going on in the opposition Democratic ballroom.

The past week's primary opened many a GOP eye — not from the standpoint of their own wins or losses or Mr. Scranton's hefty write-in vote for the presidential nod he doesn't want; but rather the demoralizing vote Miss Genevieve Blatt received in her bid for the Democratic U. S. senatorial nod.

For most Republican head-scratchers and incumbent U. S. Senator Hugh Scott will be at the starting gate again in this fall's election, little more than passing thought was given to the senatorial candidacy of (thrice) Secretary of Internal Affairs Genevieve Blatt.

The feeling in GOP circles had been all along that Supreme Court Justice Michael Musmanno would run off rather handily in the senatorial footrace with Miss Blatt — to provide Hugh Scott with a male counterpart on the Democratic side Scottites felt would not be too difficult to beat in the fall campaign.

The spectre of a loss opposing Senator Scott hardly entered GOP nogginns in any sort of serious vein.

GOPland strategy has been laid out in principle on Mr.

Scott's taking off for the crusades to do battle with a fellow male.

Of course it still may turn out this way in the end but at the present time with absentee votes apparently destined to determine the ultimate Democratic winner it would appear that Miss Blatt with her few thousand vote edge will be destined to ride side-saddle in the fall against the venerable Mr. Scott.

There can be little doubt about the fact that the hapless brigade mustered an effective distaff "to bat for Blatt" — a crusade in the primary of the past week. It seems certain that the women of the Democratic Party in the Keystone State can be credited with playing a major support role (unquestionably a number of males ran along too) in Miss Blatt's behalf.

It is this that poses a serious and somewhat unexpected obstacle for the doughty GOP forces and Senator Hugh Scott in particular.

How do you do battle with a charming lass in jousting for a top elective post? Charming though Mr. Scott may be when it comes to delighting a female audience, he's got his problems when it comes to entering the arena to raise the cudgel against a (so the title expression reads) "defenseless woman."

It seems that in the political arena a man can call a fellow male a nut or a boob and get away with it — but for him to call a gal such endearing names is regarded as tantamount to hearing the lion's den with a box of Kleenex.

Add to this the fact that if the male aspirant even approaches this point there's the risk of sending the ladies into such a huff that all these potential votes may well wind up in the detergent fluff!

Unquestionably if Miss Blatt emerges the winner on the Democratic senatorial side, the contest will be a rather uneasy and awkward one for Republicans.

Of course Miss Blatt, gracious lass that she is, insists that no punches be pulled, that the campaign should be a toe-to-toe affair regardless of her sex — but the tingling sensation still lingers in the Scott camp that "yeah, but-but-but..."

The simple, somewhat demoralizing fact is that no male candidate has yet been able to defeat a female candidate for statewide public office in Pennsylvania!

Longtime former Secretary of Internal Affairs Bill Livingston tried it back in 1954 when he was defeated by Miss Blatt on her first go-around; Republican Andy Gleason lost his ballot shirt to Miss Blatt when he tried it four years later; and Charlie Smith (GOP) lost to present (Democratic) State Treasurer Grace Sloan in 1960.

If Hugh Scott wins over Miss Blatt in the fall (providing she's finally certified the party winner) he'll not only win another term but he'll have established a somewhat noteworthy "first" to boot!

Off The Record:

—By BOB CLARK

Monday morn quarterbacking of last week's primary election brings little but the usual. However, a pattern was made in Monroe County that Gov. William W. Scranton isn't the most popular man of the hour — presidential-wise.

With a Scranton for President headquarters established and a promoted sticker campaign, Pennsylvania's governor can hardly feel that a sincere draft was evident among GOP voters in the area.

In fact, Scranton's 225,000 write-ins across the state cannot be labeled successful no matter how you turn the figures.

The governor emphatically did nothing to make the job easy for his workers. Those on the state payroll — some we know — heeded his advice and failed to turn a finger to promote the write-in campaign. Others, however, carried the stickers around in their pockets and gummed up the works — machine-wise and statistically.

Staunch Republicans have been peeved that Scranton practically ignored pleas to get physically in the race for the presidency. This was not only felt in Monroe County but in Harrisburg, Washington and several other strong GOP points along the east coast.

Even "come out, come out, William, wherever you are" supporters in the Midwest and West Coast couldn't understand the governor's "I don't want it but I'll take a sincere draft" double talk.

Fading Prospect

One GOP'er put it bluntly by shouting, "I don't want a guy in Washington handling the hot line who is undecided. Heck, Khrushchev could phone, act and we'd all be assuaged before Scranton came up with a decision."

It has been little gripes like this that soured once solid supporters of the governor.

There is a chance he'll be nominated or "drafted" as he would prefer. But turning a GOP nominee against President Lyndon B. Johnson in the November runoff is like putting East Stroudsburg State College's football team against Texas University in the Cotton Bowl — strictly no contest.

Next time around when the general public has a chance to really look at Johnson after a full term under his belt the shoe might be on the other foot. Right now, though, LBJ probably could carry Republican strongholds since the Bobby Baker setback, Johnson's "be kind to your neighbor" image has jettisoned beyond the forecasts of his most loyal backers.

In practically the same period, Scranton has lost the lustre that once was pictured almost the same breath of the late young and effervescent John F. Kennedy.

About Town

From time to time good people phone us that they found a copy of the Jan. 4, 1960 issue of the Ulster County Gazette, published in Kingston, N.Y., with an account of President George Washington's last illness, death and burial. These are valueless as hundreds of thousands were issued at Philadelphia's Centennial Fair in 1876, as souvenirs.

Grass Problems

People, including the women, are asking this column what to do about grass which raids up like a carpet when you rake it. We don't have any concrete suggestion except that if you like the pattern why not keep it.

WASHINGTON — President Johnson's personal efforts to woo businessmen by trying to dictate to members of his own White House staff.

While the President was serving a smash hit at the annual U. S. Chamber of Commerce meeting here, presidential assistants Lee White and Charles Horsky were arousing the ire of a group of leading business executives by trying to dictate to members of his own White House staff.

This massive science and industry exposition, being financed and maintained by private funds, is scheduled to be built, following New York's

Permanent Fair

World's Fair on the outskirts of Washington by 50 of the largest corporations. If President Johnson endorses it.

Originally approved by the late President Kennedy, the private project is now on dead-center because White and Horskys refuse to put the exhibition proposal before the President.

These two White House aides, both holdovers from the Kennedy administration, are taking the position that backers of the non-profit U. S. Exposition of Science and Industry, Inc., headed by former Ambassador James J. Wadsworth, must merge with a group of Washington businessmen who want the project built in downtown Washington to help stimulate business there.

"We will never approve your project unless it is merged with the Washington group," White bluntly told the Wadsworth representatives when they conferred with him at the White House.

"Has President Johnson had an opportunity to personally review the proposal as did President Kennedy?" asked Neale Roach, attorney for the group and a top Democratic fund raiser.

"No," replied White. "There must be a merger of the two groups before any proposal goes to the President."

Taking The Fifth — Pointing out that the Washington businessmen had run up considerable financial obligations, including $75,000 to a New York public relations firm, John J. Stack, Jr., executive vice president of the Wadsworth group, asked:

"Are you suggesting in the merger that our group assume the financial responsibilities of the Washington group?"

"I refuse to answer that question," snapped White. After getting nowhere with White, the group visited Secretary of Commerce Luther A. Hodges on the recommendation of Clifton Carter, the President's top political adviser.

"We like your project here at Commerce," reported Hodges, "but White and Horskys want the merger. We have specific instructions from them not to endorse the project until that happens."

In a final flanking move to get the project started, the Wadsworth group took their proposal to the Capitol, where Senate Democratic Whip Hubert Humphrey, Minn., agreed to intervene for them with President Johnson. He promised to take up the project directly with the President, by-passing both White and Horskys.

Topping The Soviets — The U. S. Exposition of Science and Industry was conceived as a dramatic way to display the achievements of U. S. business and research establishments on a permanent basis in the nation's capital.

The project is designed as this country's answer to Russia's gigantic trade exhibition in Moscow. The Soviet exhibit, which is being turned into a World's Fair for 1967, will cover 1,300 acres of pavilions, parks and pools, bordered by shops, hotels and camp sites.

If endorsed by President Johnson, the proposed U. S. exhibition will be located within a five-minute ride of the Capitol on a portion of Bolling Air Force Base, which the Defense Department is declaring surplus.

Already, General Motors and Ford Corporation have agreed to move their World's Fair exhibits from New York to Washington to expand them as part of the postwar exposition. Other corporations planning projects include:

Schooner
A great deal of interest centered on the ship Capt. Andrew Robinson built at Gloucester, Mass. He had mastered and rigged the sailing vessel in a manner different from any other.

A sizable crowd was on hand for the launching in 1713. The blocks were knocked aside and the ship slipped down the ways and slid smoothly into the water.

"Oh, how she scoons!" exclaimed an excited spectator. "Scoon," meaning to skim, was derived from the Scottish word "seon" — to skip stones across water.

Capt. Robinson took his cue from the bysander and called his vessel a "scooner." The spelling was changed, probably through Dutch influence, to "schooner."

Eldred Township Adopts Planning

KUNKLETOWN — The Eldred Township supervisors Saturday voted to adopt a planning and zoning ordinance at the meeting in the Kunkletown Firehouse.

Atty. Elmer D. Christine of East Stroudsburg, solicitor for the board, told the group several steps some other municipalities and townships have taken in their steps towards planning and zoning.

"The first thing that must be done is for the supervisors to decide if they want planning and zoning in the township; then they must adopt a planning and zoning ordinance," Christine said.

"From here on, there are several steps to be taken. They are, and not necessarily in this order, having someone from the Dept. of Commerce in Harrisburg attend the meetings and explain the entire picture to you."

"Then a meeting with a consultant from a professional planning firm should be arranged so that the board can get additional information. The person from the planning firm will be able to give approximate costs for his services; he will also tell you what services he will provide."

"Possibly the next step is to name the members to the planning commission, for at this point, the commission takes over and makes recommendations to the supervisors. The supervisors then pass or reject the recommendations from the commission," Christine concluded.

Following his short talk, the supervisors discussed the ordinance and then announced they passed the motion.

Houdaille Initiates Expansion

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Gerald C. Saltarelli, President and Chief Executive Officer of Houdaille Industries, Inc., today announced Board of Directors' approval of a $600,000 facilities expansion at the corporation's Wales - STRIPPIT Division located in Akron, N.Y.

Wales - STRIPPIT Company is a major manufacturer of sheet metal fabricating equipment for the metalworking industry. Marketed internationally, the company's board product line includes STRIPPIT self-contained hole punching and notching equipment and features the recently developed, highly automated tape controlled "Fabramatic" which also met instant acceptance by industry for its high production and cost-cutting advantages.

Russell A. Johnson, Vice President and General Manager of Wales - STRIPPIT, stated new construction, to be started at once, would increase manufacturing floor space by 35 per cent, thereby enabling this Houdaille division to keep pace with growing sales volume and an expanding industry need for this type of self-contained and automated tooling.

Other steps in the overall plan call for the installation of additional computer capacity and production machinery, which will take place on completion of the building construction phase of the expansion program.

PMVB Hosts New York Travel Agents

Twenty-seven Pocono Mountain resort establishments recently chalked up another "first" for the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau by hosting 65 travel agent representatives at a cocktail reception at the Biltmore Hotel, New York City.

The affair, arranged on a "share the cost" basis by the 27 PMVB resorts, was the first "out of the area" reception ever promoted by the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau members.

It was planned some months ago by the publicity committee of the PMVB, chaired by Richard Edgerton of The Inn at Buck Hill Falls.

Eric Schuchard, president of the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau, indicated that this first cocktail reception for travel agents was on a modest scale this year as it was mainly designed that it be a successful event that would impress travel agents and thus become an annual, or even bi-annual event by vacation bureau members.

Schuchard related that many travel agents commended the PMVB for the excellent manner in which the reception was arranged, specifically, the lack of commercialism that is frequently so prevalent at affairs of this nature.

He further stated that the typically warm Pocono hospitality prevailed throughout the reception and that the travel agents were highly impressed with the overall tone and quality of the reception.

Midway in the reception the 27 host resorts which shared the cost of this area promotion were introduced by the Executive Secretary, John E. Calhoun.

IRS Offers Help To The Needy

PHILADELPHIA — Kenneth O. Hook, District Director of Internal Revenue Service, reminded manufacturers, retailers, and other taxpayers required to file quarterly Federal excise tax returns that April 30, 1964, was the deadline for filing returns and paying the tax for the calendar quarter ending March 31, 1964.

Hook said taxpayers liable for more than $100 of the excise taxes listed on Form 720 for any month (except the third month of a quarter), are required to deposit their full payments of these taxes in local authorized banks or a Federal Reserve Bank before the last day of the month after the month in which the tax liability occurred. The taxes for the third month of the first quarter of 1964 should have been voluntarily deposited by April 30, 1964.

Taxpayers making full and timely deposits of taxes due for the first quarter of the year have until May 11, 1964, to file their Forms 720, and he added that validated Federal Depositary Receipts, Forms 537, must be submitted with Form 720.

Returns should be addressed and mailed to: "District Director of Internal Revenue, 401 N. Broad St., Philadelphia, 19108."

Volvo Dedicates A New Headquarters Building

ROCKLEIGH, N.J. — Volvo, Inc., U.S. importer of Swedish-made Volvo automobiles, dedicated its new headquarters and service building here on April 24. It was announced by Hans Larsson, president.

Situated on a six-acre tract in the Rockleigh Industrial Park, the headquarters-service facility is a one-story building covering 50,000 square feet. It consists of two units connected by an enclosed annex.

The front unit, which has a glazed brick exterior faced with aluminum curtain walling, houses sales, service, accounting and administrative offices.

The rear unit serves as a parts storage warehouse and service center.

The new facility will be staffed by upwards of 100 personnel, and will be the base of operations for Volvo, Inc. and Volvo Distributing Inc. The latter is responsible for distribution and sales of Volvo cars on the eastern seaboard and in the midwest. Larsson said that construction of the Rockleigh building was "accelerated by rapidly expanding Volvo operations in the U.S." In 1963, Volvo sales were up for the fourth consecutive year, and for the first quarter of 1964 they were up 30 per cent over last year's pace. Volvo products are marketed in over 100 countries throughout the world.

Volvo automobiles sold in the U.S. include the 1800S G.T. coupe; the 122S two-door sedan, four-door sedan and four-door station wagon; and the 544 sedan. BLISTER-RESISTANT PAINTS. Moisture is the cause of much unsatisfactory paint service. Under certain conditions, the effects of moisture can be controlled best by using special blister - resistant paints.

Here, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, a grab bar is easily installed. It should be anchored to the studs of the wall adjacent to the tub or shower. Under no circumstances should the bar be fastened only to plaster or tile where it can come loose and pull out under stress.

It is often wise to install a series of grab bars in ladder fashion against the wall. In this way, the elderly person can climb to his feet with a minimum of strain.

Additional safety aids are thermostatically controlled mixing valves for the tub-shower, inexpensive light-weight non-slip rubber mats for inside the tub and a sturdy adhesive mat for outside.

Bathroom Safety For The Elderly

Safety is important for everyone, but particularly so for elderly persons. As the scene of more accidents than anywhere else, the home is becoming even more safety conscious in regard to its senior citizens.

Eighty-five per cent of deaths due to falls in the home are among persons 65 or older. Since falling is a constant threat to this age group, a practical place to begin safety-proofing is in the bathroom.

Here, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, a grab bar is easily installed. It should be anchored to the studs of the wall adjacent to the tub or shower. Under no circumstances should the bar be fastened only to plaster or tile where it can come loose and pull out under stress.

Cadet Scouts Learn Japanese Language, Art

Delaware Water Gap — Cadet Girl Scouts, Troop 339, at their Wednesday night meeting at the firehall had as their guest Toshiko Yamashita. She has been a student at East Stroudsburg State College and will leave for her home in Japan at the end of the school term.

Her home is Ryodo Cho — Nishinomiya, Japan. Dressed in native costume, she gave Japanese phrases and their equivalent in English. Then she spent an hour to teach the Girl Scouts to make dogs, lobsters, birds and other creatures from construction paper without using glue or tape. The scouts were enthusiastic in their wishes for her safe journey home and success in her teaching profession.

Time was given to discussing the weekend of June 12 when the Cadets will be one of four groups in District 5 of Scranton-Pocono Scouts to be entertained at camp Treble by the Senior Scouts of Stroudsburg. They will learn what a "Roundup" is like.

Award Night is being planned by the Cadets, when they will cook and serve a full course dinner to their parents as their final assignment for their "Challenge of Social Dependability" award. Girls who are working at the Y.M.C.A. for a First Aid Badge will take final tests this week. Another special week-end being much discussed is that of September 18. Then the girls go to Rockwood Girl Scout Camp, near Washington, D. C. and will have opportunity to tour the national capital.

Just Between Us—

by Bobby Westbrook

Titograd, Yugoslavia — A better study in contrast would be hard to find. Straight from the middle ages, we arrived at the brand new city of Titograd. It is constructed on the site of an earlier city which was completely demolished by bombardment in World War II.

This is the capital of the province of Montenegro. It swarms with what I am sure are high party officials with brief cases and earnest expressions, and a whole convention of young people.

Yet, early in the morning, we had been in another world, another century. Before 8 a.m., we were at the monastery of Decani, about 12 miles from Pee. It is set in a gorge, surrounded by walls, poplars, and the rush of waters from the snow capped peak high above it.

One of the best preserved monuments of Serbian Medieval art, the monastery was built in the 14th century. In addition to more than 2,000 frescoes, it has marble carvings, a magnificent carved iconostasis and the sarcophagus of Stefan Dusaniski.

But, the most wonderful thing about it is that it is still being used. The wonderful restorations in Ohrid are miracles, but, human miracles, and as cold as museums (which is what they really are).

But, at Decani, a young priest with beard, long hair and black robes, who might have been a model for Saint John, was talking to a group of boys and older men gathered by the fountain.

An older, bearded priest met us inside where, for the first time, I smelled the sandalwood odor, (which incense, burning in the proper surroundings gives filling the whole vault of the church. When we presented our small gift of incense, he went bustling back to the courtyard, calling loudly for a young man who could speak English, and shared his delight in the incense with the others.

Warmed by our reception, we made a second stop at the Patriarchate of Pee, which is also set in a gorge and was once the seat of the highest Serbian Church. Four churches with a common auditorium, it too, is set within walls, bright with flowers, hives of bees and nuns, working in the garden plot.

As we stepped into the darkness from the brilliant morning sun, the glitter of candles, the scent of incense and the sound of singing held us spellbound. Clutching our incense, we tipped into the church itself, where Mass was in progress. It is sung in Serbian by hidden singers, who may have been

So, it came as a shock to find that a whole section of it had crumbled into the gorge in one place, leaving only a car's width to edge past the abyss, and, a shock to cross a spiderweb of a bridge with the supports still trellised beneath. Thirty tunnels later, we were in Titograd with not an old house, a peasant costume or a squiggle in sight. It is solid, safe, and after today's adventures — a little dull.

After lunch, at the mountain summer resort of Andrijevica, we took another 36 squiggling kilometers in our stride but still halted with delight, the road marked in red on our map from Kolašin to Titograd. It is a magnificent paved highway with guard rails and all.

General Adams-- Top Field Soldier

By BEM PRICE

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—An Air Force officer still remembers, with a touch of awe, the day he passed the office of Gen. Paul DeWitt Adams just as a colonel was emerging.

"That colonel," said the officer, "had combat ribbons up to his eyeballs and, by God, he was crying."

Since that time, the officer added, "I've learned the hard way that if you know your job you'll get along with 'P.D.A.' but Adams doesn't suffer fools gladly."

Adams, 58, is the nation's No. 1 field soldier. He commands every combat-ready soldier and airman in the United States with the exception of the Strategic Air Command and the Marines.

Fleet Too

He even has a small fleet, assigned to him by the Navy, operating in the Middle East going around—as he put it—"calling on people and doing good deeds."

Adams is commander-in-chief of the joint task force known as Strike Command — STRICOM — and, as such, he has a world of problems.

If any U.S. theater commander anywhere in the world calls for help, it is Adams' job to provide it. He also has the primary responsibility for carrying out U.S. military policies in a huge area which includes the Middle East, Africa south of the Sahara, and Southern Asia, including India and Pakistan.

In military lingo this huge area, embracing 69 nations and sheikdoms—most of them new—is identified by the acronym "MEAFSA."

Fire Prevention

If a crisis should arise in the area, Adams firmly believes that a quick reaction by the United States is a form of fire prevention. And "even if a fire starts and you can't put it out immediately, maybe you can, at least, keep it from growing," he says.

Because of the size of the MEAFSA area, Adams is constantly stressing mobility, chiefly by air.

Adams looks upon the two armored divisions attached to his command as primarily for use in the European theater, possibly in North Africa or the Middle East "if you can get them shipped in time."

But Adams clearly has little use for armor. He keeps pressing his research people to push for a tank-killing infantry weapon "which can be hauled in like cordwood and fired by striking a match."

Problems Also

The general has problems which confront few other commanders. To reach some hot-spots in the MEAFSA area, he needs permission to fly over certain neutral nations, the right to stockpile material in some nations and the right to land his troops in neutral staging areas before going into possible combat situations.

"The basic general scheme," he said, "is to get as close as you can, pull up the tail of the (airborne column) and then hit with all necessary force."

Some of his problems have been solved by the State Department in secret agreements with certain nations. Understandably, Adams declined to identify them.

In pushing for mobility, Adams and his staff are watching a Pacific experiment in stockpiling heavy equipment and supplies aboard a small aircraft carrier which could roam the seas near troubled nations.

Adams is never more than 30 seconds away from the "hot line" to the Pentagon, even on those rare occasions when he can break away to play golf.

His golf cart is equipped with a radio-telephone and so is his official car. The latter contains a device which blows the horn and keeps blowing it when a call comes through and the car is unattended. The horn can be silenced only by lifting the receiver.

Quick Assembly

Adams' staff, all 551 of them, can be assembled within an hour. There are two men on duty at all times in Adams' command post.

If the Joint Chiefs of Staff ever tell Adams to put his men in motion, he can assemble aircraft, load the troops and start them on their way within six hours.

Under his direct control, Adams has 225,000 men, 1,000 fighter-bombers and four wings of troop transports. He also has first call on the Military Air Transport Service.

Beyond this are the reserve troop carrier squadrons which can put 65 per cent of their planes and crews into the air on two hours notice; all of them within 12 hours.

Military Scholar

The stocky, 185-pound Adams is a military scholar of high order. He is of that breed of strategist who holds that the most successful generals are the ones who attain their objectives without fighting, if possible, and with the fewest casualties if fighting is necessary.

Adams lectures over and over on "economy of force" as a principle of war.

The general and his wife, the former Mabel Decker, live in a barn-like, white stucco house with their daughter, Majorie, at MacDill Air Force Base. A son, Robert T. Adams, is a regular Army first lieutenant.

Adams spends a great deal of time flying about the country on inspection trips in former President Harry S. Truman's old plane, the "Independence." Asked to describe the general's rare, quiet home hours, a staff member replied, "He reads. She knits. Everything the man reads is somehow related to his job."

Long Working Hours

One thing about Adams is certain: There are few, if any, men in the nation who spend more time on the job. He works seven days a week, at least 12 hours a day, more likely 16 to 18 hours. He has even been known to call staff conferences on Christmas Eve.

Since STRICOM was established Oct. 9, 1961, Adams has had three days' leave. He went to a nearby beach—and an aide got his shoes filled with sand twice a day running papers out from headquarters for the general's information or signature. Adams is little known outside military circles. He appeared briefly on the world stage as the taciturn, unapproachable commander of U.S. forces in Lebanon during the 1958 crisis.

This is despite the fact that he fought with conspicuous success as a regimental commander in Italy during World War II. In any event, Adams has come a long way from a boyhood in the red, impoverished hills of Alabama where he was born Oct. 6, 1906, in the town of Heflin.

Adams still has a soft Southern drawl, so soft at times it borders on a mumble—unless he is angry.

One officer said of Adams: "He can charm you right out of your chair—or blister so badly you need first aid."

One measure of Adams is that he has put together a staff drawn from the Army, Air Force, Marines and Navy, which works with uncommon smoothness.

DANBURY, Conn.—The island of Puerto Rico is just 210 minutes and a $69 round trip fare away from New York City's John F. Kennedy International Airport. You can leave the airport and be basking in the sun of our Puerto Rican commonwealth in about the same time it would take you to drive to Albany or Providence.

Thus the jet plane has made a "colonial possession" a very near subject.

Puerto Rico has 900 U.S.-owned factories and 2½ million U.S. citizens. Another one million Puerto Rican U.S. citizens live on the mainland. These people not only share our citizenship but they share our mutual problems.

Thousands of American tourists and great numbers of U.S. businessmen visit Puerto Rico. They revel in its modern hotels and beaches; they are somewhat appalled at the slums in the capital city of San Juan, but they cheer the charming new housing developments.

Some would say that the island is similar to Georgia or Florida or our Southwestern states; but many also ask the question is it American or is it Caribbean Spanish. Puzzled Puerto Ricans ask the same question of themselves.

Many people from the mainland look upon Puerto Ricans as amiable second-class citizens, underprivileged of course, whom we acquired by defeating Spain in the Caribbean back in 1898. Now 66 years later we still do not quite know what to do with our dark-skinned cousins. Some may still have the vague notion that Puerto Ricans are really Spaniards and we can take away their citizenship if they don't behave properly!

Their Idea of Us

Knowing of the vague unknowingness that most people from the mainland exhibit toward Puerto Rico, I was anxious to determine how our relationships with the island were bearing up and what the Puerto Ricans in official positions thought of their fellow citizens in the U. S. proper.

Puerto Rico is our only Commonwealth. Its people became full fledged citizens of the U.S. by a congressional act of 1917. All children born of Puerto Ricans also enjoy a special status. They do not vote in presidential elections but neither do they have to pay federal income taxes.

If you were looking for the man to designate "Mr. Puerto Rico" today there would be the single choice of the present Governor, Luis Munoz Marin. He is the son of Luis Munoz Rivera, an outstanding patriot who gained the first home rule charter from Spain in 1897.

Luis Munoz Marin took office in 1949. This position he won and continues to hold through the democratic process of persuading the people to vote for him and his party. In many respects he bears the same relation to his people as a combined Washington-Jefferson-Lincoln-FDR would be to the average American citizen.

Dynamic!

Look Magazine in its recent article on Puerto Rico calls the 66-year-old Munoz "aging" on the first page and dynamic at the end. I found him dynamic, somewhat poetical and essentially a practical statesman who had won his own revolution by peaceful methods.

Before leaving for San Juan I had written to Governor Munoz for a personal interview and had taken an extra precaution of asking Senator Ribicoff to back up my request. The Senator's letter secured the Governor's assent; I doubt if my personal request got much past the swinging iron gates which guard the Governor's mansion from the general public.

(It is opened at stated hours for groups of tourists who are conducted through the first floor of the mansion on weekdays and to the upper floors on weekends when the governor and his family are in the country.)

Difficult To See

It took several days to arrange a visit with the governor as he had been ill and on his return faced a full calendar of domestic appointments. His aide, Charles Zimmerman, young, wise and harassed, questioned me rather closely about my motives for seeing the governor and then satisfied as to my sincerity, showed me the letter from Senator Ribicoff with the governor's "delighted" note on it, which he said indicated, "you're in."

(Zimmerman was born in Buffalo, as he says, while his mother was passing through.)

In the meanwhile he arranged appointments for me with the Secretary of Labor, the Director of Tourism and the Economic Development Administrator, as I was anxious to get first hand impressions from responsible officials.

When it came time to see Munoz I again had to pass through the iron gate business. This is a bit of protocol in which you stand out on the street and advise the guards that you have an appointment with someone. Then came a quick confab of several uniformed men and an aide or two, who would check your name against an appointment list and then (grudgingly I felt) would open the gates.

I have never felt warm towards iron gates opening in front or closing behind me.

"Divided and Confused?"

As Zimmerman walked with me to the Governor's office I had in my hand an article from Look Magazine which a few days previously had been published in the 15,000 copies circulating on the island. The article pointed up the problems of Munoz and Puerto Rico and implied that he was in deep political trouble. It stated that the people were divided and confused. There were a number of other controversial subjects in the story which I thought the Governor might wish to clarify.

The Governor's desk is at one end of what might have been a small ballroom and as I walked the length I knew I would have but little time to fire questions at Governor Munoz as my appointment was for 15 minutes and 10 minutes had been used up by previous callers. In the waiting room was a delegation of San Juan lawyers. They, too, were waiting for the governor.

Rather hastily I gave Mr. Munoz Senator Ribicoff's greetings and then suggested that the article in Look would be a good pattern for our conversation. He agreed and I suggested for his answer:

"How can a native of Puerto Rico be both a Spanish-speaking Puerto Rican and a U.S. citizen at the same time?"

This is a simple question to a complex answer.

The governor replied: Being a Puerto Rican is a new way of being an American. It is a phenomenon that never before happened in the history of the U.S.

"Without benefit of statehood and by legislative fiat you created American citizens out of Puerto Ricans. Because this law in itself was new, the results must be new and we must not be impatient if these new citizens created by a new law, do not immediately become your kind of an American citizen."

Hispanic Heritage

He inferred even more—that the Hispanic heritage of Puerto Rico adds an ethnic flair to the image of the United States, just as our culture has been enhanced by the immigrations of the Italian, Jewish, Irish etc.

In later discussions with other Puerto Rican officials I found the same theme expressed in many different ways, but essentially—the cultural acceptance between the continentals and the Puerto Ricans will work to the advantage of both. . . . If more effort is made by both!

Returning to my question of this dual Spanish and U.S. background he said: "The great mass of my people want to be Americans."

"How about the intellectuals?" I asked.

"Some of the intellectuals may want to be Spanish but their numbers are few!"

He jiggled his knee rapidly as if he was annoyed that after so many years of being citizens in the Commonwealth with all its economic and social advantages, there were still some natives who wanted to be something else.

For the whole 25 minutes that I was with him he jiggled his knee; I thought might be just impatience. I was told later (in Jamaica) that this knee-jiggling is a Puerto Rican syndrome—evidence of the haste to Americanize while retaining the serenity of the Caribbean. Why the syndrome hits the knee is a case for the diagnostic physicians.

A Poor Image In The U.S.

Looking down at my notes as he glanced up at another aide entering the room I suggested to him that the average American (continental) had a poor image of the Puerto Ricans, engendered because 750,000 of them in the U. S. were crowded into a small section of poor school buildings and inadequate housing and were in the low socio-economic category.

"Did he have any suggestions about improving this image?"

"Yes," he almost exploded, "Let them unite and their image will improve. They argue too much among themselves."

"Too fragmented, perhaps," I suggested.

"Yes, too fragmented," he replied. "Let them unite and vote to improve the situations which would improve their image." He seemed a little out of patience with Puerto Ricans emigrated to the mainland and then took too long to adjust to customs and language.

At this point I said that I was surprised that so many of the natives, with the exception of those in close contact with the tourists, spoke so little English. I said I couldn't quite reconcile myself to the fact that here were American citizens not speaking the language.

He replied that general education was not prevalent till about 20 years ago, and it was still a major task to educate the people in Spanish as well as English. "Where would we get the thousands and thousands of bilingual teachers who could teach our youngsters adequately?"

Spanish still remains the language of instruction but there are intensive programs to improve the teaching of English throughout the education system.

This problem is complicated further because Spanish is the language of the home.

The teaching of conversational English is a long range program but the Puerto Ricans are not impatient—they seem to have more time than we do. As one American reminded me: "The Puerto Ricans are on a leisurely 28 hour day which gives them plenty of time for everything."

No Comment on Birth Control

"Don't get me into birth control! Don't quote me on it!" said the Governor. "I have had enough trouble over that subject!" He chuckled as he made these remarks but repeated the "no quote."

In 1960 the Catholic Church of Puerto Rico bitterly opposed Munoz in his re-election campaign in which private birth control information had the backing of the Munoz party. He won reelection easily.

Many prominent Catholic bishops and laity on the mainland were embarrassed by the aggressiveness of the Puerto Rican clergy in the election. Since that time some priests and several of the opposing bishops have been transferred off the island.

The opposition centered around the publicized efforts of the administration and certain groups to make birth control information available to the general problems require some kind of control which will bring a better balance between population numbers and available resources.)

In 1952, Governor Munoz paid a personal visit to the late Pope John. There has been little trouble with the bishops lately and birth control has not become an open issue.

All the truth of the "Bishop" flap is not generally known. Like so many truths subject to the interpretation there are all sides.

A Bit of Legend

When we look over Puerto Rico in 1898 we governed the island for some years under the old California Code, which legend has it, prohibited the dissemination of birth control information. The code also provided that voting places should have pot-boiled stoves to furnish heat when needed. Obviously since it never got cold in Puerto Rico they didn't pay much attention to the pot-boiled stove proviso.

However, since Puerto Rico is a country which believes in individual liberty even more than most of the States and since the population growth threatens to engulf the little island, the Munoz party thought it would be a good idea to provide information which would help control the size of families. (I don't know as they did anything about the pot-boiled stoves.)

Also lost in the heat of this battle between church and state was the request of the church for "released time" from the public schools for religious instruction. Some informants told me that this was more of an issue than the birth control problem.

Physicians Give Information
It can be concluded that at this time you can secure needed birth control information in Puerto Rico—the extent and details dependent somewhat upon the willingness of the physician.

If parents desire to limit the size of the family and can do hardship it is very probable that even doctors with strong religious scruples will give assistance.

Time Run Short

Every few minutes another aide would enter the room with papers rattling in his hand and usually indicated to the Governor that the contingent of lawyers was still waiting for their 5 o'clock appointment. By this time it was 5:25 and I was barely half through my questions. The Governor would occasionally reach over and press a buzzer which I assumed was a signal to the aide, who was by then running interference for the lawyers.

I had a slight feeling of being pushed—by the button and the aide.

In spite of all this by-play Mr. Munoz gave patient consideration to my persistent questioning.

Stop Vote Selling

As we were winding up I asked him what he considered the three outstanding accomplishments of his career. He answered quickly on the first: "When I got the voters to stop selling their votes for $200, I brought democracy to Puerto Rico!"

For many years the Puerto Rican electorate was in the hands of any group which could buy the votes for $2 each. This was the standard price over the island. Munoz pled, fought and enjoined the voters to vote for his party in a voluntary instead of a pay-as-you vote basis.

Defeated Corrupt Voting

The eventual success of Munoz' campaign, which he personally led whenever he could get ten people to listen to him, freed the peasantry from the control of corrupt politicians. It marked the turning point in his career as well as a new era for the voter.

His second major achievement, he said was "Operation Bootstrap."

The success of his Munoz administration in inducing 900 American factories to locate on the island has made Puerto Rico the envy of the Latin American nations. Representatives and students from the new African nations flock to Puerto Rico to find the secrets of her great industrial expansion.

Much of the early financing of Operation Bootstrap was secured from the excise taxes on Puerto Rican rum sold in the United States.

The American factories on the island have also created an industrial complex benefiting both Puerto Rico and the United States. Today Puerto Rico ranks as the fifth largest buyer of American goods in the world.

Puerto Rico buys more from the U. S. than all of the 13 Latin American countries.

Munoz was very proud as he rattled off figures indicating how Puerto Rico had raised its standard of living higher than any other Latin American country and he asked me to emphasize in my articles that they were the big customer for U.S. goods.

As he rose from his chair to signal the end of our discussion he concluded with: "Operation Serenity is my goal today."

Back in 1952 Mr. Munoz in the Commencement Day speech before Harvard University said:

"I see for Puerto Rico—a culture based on work, on peace of mind, on generosity; a people sheltered in modest but comfortable homes, satisfied with their tasks, secure against misfortune, possessed of abundant and simple food, happy in their recreation, without poverty; a land in which a man is esteemed for what he wants to do rather than for what he proposes to get; a community profoundly respectful of God and thereby free from spiritual conflict."

Operation Serenity

Briefly "Operation Serenity" is as its title implies; holds that individual happiness and wholesome family life are more important than the acquisition of material things.

He says further: "Material abundance without spiritual excellence is a frustration and almost a perversion of development."

I think that Munoz hopes that Operation Serenity will tend to combat a seething social unrest which seeks status based on money.

It worries Mr. Munoz that everyone wants a brand new car every year. He says that there are too many automobiles in Puerto Rico today; why bring in more!

The cynic may say that Operation Serenity is an administration attitude to people who want but can't have.

"Serenity" is the part in Mr. Munoz speaking. It is his answer to increasing industrialization. It also provides a framework on which Latin American heritage and culture may tend to flourish.

I left the Governor's office as the lawyers trooped in apologizing to him for keeping him so long. He said that it was all right that he would rather talk to newspapermen than lawyers any day.

French Guiana

Prison Colony To Big Business

CAYENNE, French Guiana (AP)—In less than two decades, French Guiana has been transformed from a dread penal colony into a bustling business community.

Dirt roads once trod by convict work gangs have become paved highways humming with the traffic of hundreds of streamlined Suncas Peugeot and Fiats.

New homes and apartment buildings are mushrooming on land that was matted jungle 18 years ago. Along the muddy waterfront, American shrimp-packing firms have set up modern plants.

But grim legends still discourage investors and settlers from making a stake in this lush territory covering 34,740 square miles, of which 90 per cent is still covered by thick Amazon rain forest.

"People must stop thinking of Guiana as a place of fever, snakes, spiders and terrible heat," said Raymond Vaudet, 63, who came to the islands in 1935 as a convicted burglar, escaped and returned after World War II to become a respected restaurant owner.

French Guiana's 36,000 inhabitants are proud of their community and sensitive about the fact that it has developed more slowly than any other South American region in its 360 years under French control.

Until France closed down the infamous prison camps in 1946, Guiana was looked on as a living hell, of which Devil's Island was the symbol.

Over the past 12 years, however, the French government has been pouring millions of francs into an effort to end Guiana's status as an economic parasite.

In 1952, France launched a program of road building, land clearance and reclamation. Recently it began work deepening the waterfront approaches at Cayenne to make room for the increase in shipping.

All merchandise is still imported, but new stores are opening.

"Cayenne has changed faster in the last few years than it did in the previous 100 years," said one resident.

Kaiser Aluminum interests have signed a contract with the government to exploit bauxite deposits in the Kaw Mountains southeast of Cayenne. Production may start next year and the hoped-for export figure for 1966 is 500,000 tons a year.

The last gold mines shut down in 1959 but a California placer mining company plans to begin production on old sites with new methods in cooperation with a French company.

Only 10,000 acres of French Guiana are under cultivation but the government plans to add 5,000 shortly by draining swamp land east of Cayenne. Sugar cane has been the only cash crop but technicians are trying to add cacao, coconut margarine, and pineapple for export to France.

Guiana today is a far cry from the penal colony where thousands of French convicts were confined between the years of 1852 and 1946. Many died from fever, privation or harsh treatment.

Devil's Island is now a lush palm-covered meadow 27 miles from Cayenne in muddy Atlantic waters.

Guiana has been a full department of France with representatives in Parliament since 1946.

Revolution... In Canada

QUEBEC (AP)—Revolution sounds out of place in North America, but a kind of revolution is the central political fact of life in Canada today.

After nearly a century of uneasy partnership, the French-Canadians in Quebec are demanding a new deal with the nation's English-speaking majority.

They are determined to become masters in their own house, preferably through a stronger Quebec within a stronger Canada. The alternative, many believe, is an independent Quebec, an Alaska-sized nation stretching from New England to the Arctic.

The issues focus mainly on a jangling for authority between the provincial government in Quebec and the federal government in Ottawa, but the threat of violence from an extremist minority is in the background.

The wide range of French-Canadian viewpoints also clouds the picture.

"I think we should put a big bomb in the Parliament building in Ottawa and blow it up," a young French-Canadian terrorist said in Montreal, the hotbed of separatists seeking a break with English-speaking Canada.

In Quebec City, where a dynamic provincial government sits, a leading French-Canadian intellectual dismissed the terrorists as misguided juvenile delinquents.

"We don't hate the English," he said. "They just hate us."

Both views—the threat of violence and the feeling that French Canada is something special—have triggered a reaction of misunderstanding in English-speaking Canada. Many Canadians fear English-Canada will get fed up with Quebec and play into the separatists' hands.

Quebec wants a new relationship with Ottawa to chart its own political, economic and cultural destiny. Basically, it wants more Quebec tax dollars to stay in Quebec.

Canada's constitution divides power between the federal government and the 10 provinces. Education, welfare and other key areas are provincial preserves. Several provinces besides Quebec are pressing Ottawa for more autonomy. Some tax demands. British Columbia, for example, go farther than Quebec's.

The problem centers on Quebec for two reasons. Friction has long existed between French and English Canadians. And Quebec has evolved from a backward, inward-looking cultural refuge to an awakened force fighting for its place in the sun.

From Ottawa's view, the federal government needs central power to even out differences between the have and have-not provinces. Its search for a formula to help Quebec's demands without upsetting the other provinces is a delicate task. Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson has said: "The whole of Canada is greater than the sum of its parts." In Quebec this statement was interpreted as meaning "He's saying they're better than we are."

To the young extremist in Montreal, the choice is "independence or death."

Yanks Split; Phils Lose

Yanks—Nats

NEW YORK (AP) — Relief pitcher Dave Stenhouse and the Washington Senators fought off a two-out Yankee rally in the ninth inning and preserved a 6-5 victory over New York and a split of their Sunday double-header.

The Yankees won the opener 4-0 behind the three-hit, 13-strikeout pitching of young Al Downing.

The Senators, staked to a solid lead on a pinch single by Jim King and the sparkling relief pitching of Marshall Bridges, had a 6-2 margin going into the ninth inning of the nightcap when the Yankees erupted against their old mates.

Mickey Mantle delivered a pinch-hit single for one run and Tony Kubek drove in two more with a controversial double that

Northern Dancer Preakness-Bound

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Northern Dancer, driving winner of the Kentucky Derby in record smashing time, heads for the May 16 running of the $150,000-added Preakness with trainer Horatio Luro confident the little Canadian-owned horse once again will prove his superiority over Hill Rise, the pride of California.

"My horse is dead fit," said the genial 61-year-old Argentine as he watched the Dancer graze contentedly among the clover and fresh grass outside his Churchill Downs barn Sunday morning.

Occasionally the Derby winner would pause to nuzzle a small child, hoping for a lump of sugar.

Relaxed
"You can see he is perfectly relaxed," said Luro, who now can boast of two Derby winners and two records in three tries.

Luro also tightened the saddle girth on Decidedly, who smashed Whirlaway's 21-year-old Derby standard with 2:00 2/5 clocking in 1962.

Northern Dancer lowered the mark to two minutes flat Saturday with a sizzling 24-second last quarter as he moved quickly to the lead at the top of the home stretch, opened up a two-length margin with one-eighth of a mile to go and then withstood the desperate challenge of favored Hill Rise, the son of George A. Pope's El Peco Ranch.

Rex Ellsworth's California-owned The Scoundrel was 3 1/4 lengths back in third place with a nose advantage over Roman Brother.

Only Northern Dancer, Hill Rise and The Scoundrel were definite Preakness starters as the Derby starters prepared to leave the Downs.

Decisions Pending
The next four finishers — Roman Brother, Quadrangle, Mr. Brick and Mr. Moonlight — will head for New York within a day or so. Their trainers were waiting a few days before deciding whether to go in the 1 3/16 miles of the Preakness.

Bill Hartack, whose running feud with the press has made the jockey a controversial figure, has a Derby record as enviable as that of Luro. He was aboard 1957 winner in Liege and Venetian Way in 1960 before his record-break performance aboard Decidedly.

The triumph with Northern Dancer gave him a Derby performance of four victories in six attempts and left him only one short of Eddie Arcaro's record.

Hartack got Northern Dancer when Willie Shoemaker decided he would rather ride Hill Rise.

Northern Dancer's victory, worth $114,300 of the total purse of $156,800 was his sixth straight triumph and gave the son of Nearctic-Natalma a record of 13 victories, two seconds and one third in 16 career starts.

Shoemaker had no excuses or public regrets over his choice of mounts.

"I would do it again," he said. "We just got beat by a better horse."

Nicklaus Recovers To Nab Tournament Of Champs Crown

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Golfer Jack Nicklaus, whose big game suffered a near collapse on the back nine holes, hung on Sunday and won the $65,000 Tournament of Champions for the second straight year.

Big Jack holed a spectacular putt from the edge of the green on the final hole for a one-over-par 73 and a 72-hole total of 279.

Nicklaus came to the 18th hole with a slender one-stroke margin over Al Geiberger and Doug Sanders, a hefty five-stroke lead at one point having melted to a tie with Geiberger.

Nicklaus abruptly cashed in on the $12,000 winner's prize with his birdie putt.

Geiberger, with a 69, and Sanders, with a 66, tied for second at 281.

Deadlocked 3rd
Deadlocked at 282 were U. S. Open champion Julius Boros, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Don Fairfield, Tommy Jacobs and Paul Harney.

Arnold Palmer, with his second straight 70, finished at 284. Art Wall Jr. and Gary Player tied at 285.

Nicklaus started the round on the 7,073-yard, par 36-72 Desert Inn Country Club course with a three-stroke lead over Rodriguez.

After nine holes Chi Chi was still chasing Nicklaus, but the complexion changed abruptly.

Nicklaus found himself in serious trouble when he took a double bogey six on No. 12. He drove into an evergreen tree and had to drop the ball out, missed the green and then missed a short putt.

Geiberger tied him when Nicklaus three-putted No. 15 for a bogey 6. But Geiberger missed on his chance on the 18th.

The slender Geiberger lost the tournament on the 18th hole when he hit into a trap, and missed the putt for a bogey 5.

Split Rock Pro To Ski For East

LAKE HARMONY — Gosta "Johnnie" Johnson, ski professional at Big Boulder Ski Area of Split Rock Lodge, has been selected as one of the United States Eastern Amateur Ski Association instructors to represent the Eastern U.S. at national tryouts in Aspen, Colorado, in the middle of May.

He is the only "pro" on the eastern division team selected from outside the New England States.

Purpose of the Aspen tryouts is to select a delegation of twelve ski teachers to represent this nation at the International Ski School Congress to be held next winter in Austria.

This event takes place every four years and delegations from all skiing nations participate to compare notes on ski teaching. Another purpose is to establish International Ski School policies for the next four years.

The U.S. delegation will include for the first time a demonstration team of six ski teachers to demonstrate the new American ski technique.

The USEASA team of 10 demonstrators, of which Johnson is a member, will compete with seven other divisions of the U.S. Ski Association. The Split Rock professional was selected at the annual rally of USEASA Certified Professional Ski Teachers.

The Swedish-born professional is now in his 14th year at Big Boulder. He said he is "very proud" to be selected through competitive skiing and demonstration tests judged by five USEASA examiners and is particularly proud also that he won representation for Pennsylvania on the team.

Game Board Meets

MARSHALLS CREEK — The Pennsylvania Game Commission moved to re-establish an Information and Education Division at its meeting in Marshalls Creek on April 24 and 25.

According to Game Commission President H. L. Buchanan of Franklin, the eight-member group felt that the commission's information and education work should be on a par with other commission activities and voted to make the I. and E. section a division.

The staff will now pursue the formal process of getting the division official approval. The game commission had an I. and E. Division from 1949 to 1955 under the direction of Leo A. Lullinger who is now retired.

In other action the commission decided to seek an amendment to the game law to require the use of a turkey tag by successful hunters. Much like the present big game tag, the proposed turkey tag will be a part of the license.

Other action included a proposed change in the law to reduce the minimum age for the special three-day non-resident shooting grounds license from 16 to 12-years-old. Another proposed amendment would make it easier for a person who has lost his hunting license to get a replacement license.

The commission revoked the hunting privileges of 673 persons for major game law violations and restored the hunting rights of seven others.

ESSC Hosts Golf Tilt On May 11

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Pennsylvania State College Annual Golf Tournament will be hosted by East Stroudsburg State College on Monday, May 11, at the Glenbrook Country Club.

With practice time scheduled on May 10, the official matches will begin with a 9 a.m. tee-off time on May 11.

Four men will compose a team for the 18 hole medal play. The low scoring team will be declared the winner and a team trophy and individual medals to carry back to their college.

The host college, East Stroudsburg State, will be a strong favorite due to their undefeated play to date, but the consistently strong squads of the state colleges — especially from the Western part of the state — cannot be counted out.

The foursome of Roger Stern, Warren Landis, Dick Kieh and Jim Barniak have been leading the East Stroudsburg golf team in their present undefeated season.

All have been shooting 80 throughout the season. Rounding out the squad are newcomers Dave Petteroff, Dick Gerlach and Ray Caruso.

Sporting a 6-0 record to date with wins over Bloomsburg, Lock Haven, Wilkes, Mansfield, King, and West Chester, the team must get by their four remaining foes to keep their record unblemished.

Total scoring to date, the Warriors hold an 81 to 27 edge over their opponents.
